

ACCREDITATION REQUIREMENTS FOR EMDRNZ TRAINERS

Name:

IMPORTANT: If any written or recorded information is not in English, a translation must be provided.

1. Licensing/Registration

You must provide a copy of your licence/registration as a mental health practitioner or clinician as well as evidence that you are a member of your national NZ professional association.

2. Clinical Experience

You must provide:

- (a) Two videos of your EMDR practice. The first video should be of a complete EMDR therapy session from the end of phase 2 (explanation of EMDR, reminding of safe place and stop sign) to phase 7. Phases 1 and 8 should be provided in writing (diagnosis etc). The second video should demonstrate your ability to use a Cognitive Interweave appropriately. (This video might be quite short). Both videos must be to the standard of an EMDR seminar teaching video. They must demonstrate that your understanding and ability to practice the EMDR protocol is at the level that would be expected of a trainer.
- (b) Proof of a minimum of 2 years' post-certification experience as an EMDR consultant with evidence of thorough experience of clinical practice. This will include evidence of having treated acute and complex trauma and chronic complex dissociative disorders. This must be corroborated by a written statement from an accredited trainer.
- (c) Proof of attendance at a minimum of 5 complete training courses (all parts), where you were assessed to have successfully facilitated small group live practice and practical exercises, including work with Cognitive Interweave techniques. (Written confirmation must be provided by a senior trainer).

3. Professional standing in the field of trauma

You must provide proof of at least 40% of professional time in clinical practice (including clinical supervision) or at least 1 day per week if working part time.

It is also encouraged to provide proof of sufficient standing within the clinical and trauma field (clinical references, publications, general reputation). (Personal references may be from academic colleagues or peers).

4. Teaching Experience

You must provide:

- (a) Proof of sufficient general teaching experience (examples of teaching students, presentations, professional association trainings, running psychoeducation of groups etc).

- (b) You must have presented various parts (approximately 30 minutes each) of an accredited EMDRNZ training course until you are judged by an accredited EMDRNZ trainer to be competent. You must demonstrate your ability to:
 - Present the material in a clear and informative manner which adheres to Shapiro's latest edition of her text "EMDR: Principles, Procedures and Protocols".
 - Engage effectively with the audience.
 - Answer questions from the audience appropriately.
 - Demonstrate your ability to manage group process.

This must be done on a minimum of 4 occasions. Your mentor (senior trainer) may require you to provide further teaching presentations. The 4 presentations will be made up as follows:

- 2 presentations will be of teaching parts of the eight-phase protocol.
- 1 presentation will involve teaching the Cognitive Interweave or Blocked Processing.
- 1 presentation will involve teaching the Adaptive Information Processing model or outlining current EMDR related research.

The assessing EMDRNZ accredited Senior Trainer must provide a written testimonial stating that you have met the above criteria.

- (c) video evidence

In addition, you must provide a full unedited video of one of the above presentations which took place during an accredited EMDRNZ training. This will include answering questions from the audience. This video must demonstrate that your presentation and teaching skills meet the highest professional standards.

or

A member of the EMDRNZ Standards Committee, has observed your EMDR presentation and assessed that your teaching skills meet the highest professional standards.

Please note: On each occasion, the assessing EMDRNZ accredited trainer will use as a guide the Presenter's Evaluation Form in order to ensure that all applicants are being assessed to meet similar standards.

5. Ethical standing and Integrity

You must include in your application the following signed statement concerning the validity of the statements and evidence that you have provided, your integrity in teaching and practice and your willingness to adhere to the ethical and professional standards of your professional body:

"I confirm that all statements and evidence I have provided to the committee are truthful and accurate. I further confirm that at all times, I will behave with integrity in my teaching and practice, and that I will adhere to the ethical and professional standards and rules of my professional body."

Please note: Your application does not commence until all the above information has been received. September 2020
